

A Sapling Sprouted From the Depth of Heart

--

Jolly Bhattacharjee¹

A Sapling sprouted from the depth of heart
And some gemlike droplets came to kiss,
Chimes were heard on the dry branches,
As chirps of crackers burst on the birds beak.
Be it the birds of the sky or the crawling animals on the land
Everyone did welcome, that little sapling to stand,
For everyone knew its worth,
That tomorrow a plant shall rise and take the shape of a Tree.
With canopy of shades to cover and make the land free from heat,
But there came a man on a big fat car,
Spilling over wealth and chest to fill,
Yet mouth of greed never closed its lid.
And on the place of the sapling,
A palatial house he built with amenities that served all his needs.
He heard not the cry of the animals in pain,
Nor the agony of the barren jungle that waited in vain,
He cared not why the natural cool breeze stopped,
And Why the heat of the sun was burning hot.
All he knew was his selfish desires,
But the End of the World he cared not to stop.

Jhimly 24/4/2016

¹ Jhimly, a poetess known also as Jolly Bhattacharjee, in Facebook , is a prominent writer. She has done her Masters in Philosophy from North Eastern Hill University, Shillong, India. She uses her imaginative skills, philosophical and cognitive reasoning in creating poems, that touches the readers mind. It can range from love poem to inspirational to emotional or to the day today affairs of life. Her passion for her work reflects through her poems. She has been quite successful in establishing herself as poetess in Social Media like facebook by the knack of her poetic ability, within a short period of time. Apart from writing poems, she also has keen interest in painting and other arts.

"A Sapling Sprouted From the Depth of Heart"

Second Edition

International Journal of Research and Humanities Studies

Vol. 2, Issue 2, December 2016

WWW.IJRHS.WEEBLY.COM

